“ I had the wonderful opportunity to speak with Chioma a lot about her future plans...and life, family, friends, young men, and the amazing, good, bad, and ugly in the world. Almost every day during her senior year, she spent an hour in the College & Career Center. We talked and I learned about her, her great intelligence, her culture, her dreams, her drive to someday help children. Time shared with her was a great blessing. She is gone too soon and I'm very sad about this, but my faith lets me know she is always a part of this world. May her memory be eternal. My very sincere condolences to her family and friends.

“ Chioma which I called her "Dike" because I call all students by their last names was one of my "babies" for two years 11th and 12th grade for mathematics. Although she didn't have to take my class her senior year, she insisted and stayed with me. She was such a joy to have in class. I remember when she made me some brownies that were absolutely deeeeeeeelicious!!! Baking was her thing, and she did well at it with her academics being parallel to her baking...absolutely exceptional! She also baked a cake for a project she had to do for my class (photo attached). The look on her face "a project for math?" I could always read her facial expressions without her ever saying a thing just her illuminating smile and goofy laugh made me reply with a "yes a project or two in this math class!" She laughed and laughed about it. If you knew Dike you knew her goofy laugh, smart brain, and baking skills. I often blamed her for making me gain a few pounds because she would bring me a plethora of baked goods from home or her culinary arts class. We had a very good relationship talking about life and college. If I had a class full of "Dikes" retirement would never cross my mind...I would teach eternally. This was a hard one to hear that she is now in Heaven flying around baking goods and helping other angels academically because that is what she did here on earth. Looooovvveee you "My Dike!"

“ I was Chioma’s 12th grade AP Literature teacher. I have fond memories of her. She was the type of student who would want to perfect her writing and took advantage of every opportunity to do so. I also remember her love for cooking. Additionally, I especially remember her fabulous acting as a high class Victorian society woman when the class had a tea party after reading The Importance of Being Earnest. We all had such a good time acting absurdly and laughing about it. The world is going to miss out on what she had to offer. She was an extraordinary person. I hope that soon her memories will give you all more comfort than sorrow. God Bless-Mrs. Williams
