I remember the professional Freddie B Carter, president of the Detroit Black School Administrators (she wanted me as her vice-President); the outstanding school administrator (one time she asked me to come to Cadillac MS to speak to a group of Serbian painters who were going to paint over the super graphics she had just painted indicating areas of study: there she was with arms outstretched saying, "no paint" in her best Serbian/English; she co-created National Writing Project: Metro-Detroit and trained teachers in Detroit and north into the thumb of Michigan. She was the consummate professional with an endearing manner. She drew people to her. She lead committees for state and national Teachers of English Conferences held in Detroit. She was my go-to person for leadership and professional training for 25 years. Like so many, I can see and hear her right now. She will forever be in my heart.

To all who knew her, loved her. I know that I certainly did. I will miss her terribly. She was dedicated and committed and the consummate teacher. She touched and embraced so many students - young and old, showered them with patience, humor, love and knowledge. She was so much fun and so very generous. She gave the gift of education to those in need and to those that just needed a piece of her wisdom and love. We had such good times together. Laughing and discussing the events of the job. She was the perfect hostess, serving delicious meals, hosting dinner parties, and ready to dance. And she could dance. I miss her, I love her and she was my friend. Blessed travels, Freddie Carter. I love you.
